

AMERICAN ADVENTURE

Youngsters from Long Row Primary School put on a show to remember when they performed an American Thanksgiving play for parents at the school last week. Pupils used their acting and musical talents in the performance which started with a piano solo followed by a musical number 'God Bless America'.

Helen Robinson, director of the 'Learning Through Drama' group, used to teach in America so the children had the benefit of an original script used in the US. Miss Robinson, said "It went really well. It was a really nice afternoon lots and lots of parents came which was nice. The parents loved it and the children's teachers said to me that the children that come to do drama have really gained a lot of confidence and that their expression and clarity has greatly improved."

The children made their own Pilgrim and Red Indian costumes especially for the performance with the help of their parents.
